GRATUITOUS ADVERTISING.

In the present advanced state of newspaper publishing, it is ref eshing to behold such examples of primitive simplicity as are furnished by sundry antediluvian correspondents of a New York journal, who, in the most artless and confiding manner, present to that paper accounts of the merits of various watering places, of which they happen to be proprietors, and the extraordinary attractions, merits and advantages of which are, in their opinion, of great interest to the

It is pleasing and edifying, in this grand march of human progress, sometimes to pause and look back at the rude beginnings and tedious and painful development of inventions and discoveries which are now in the full tide of successful experiment. Compare a Minnie rifle with the primitive firelock, or one of Hoe's last and fastest with the first printing press, or an Atlantic steamer with the rickety fabric which Fulton first launched upon the Hudson; and there has not been a greater change than in the business arrangements of the press. There was a time when a newspaper might be likened to a tavern kept by a private individual for the sole benefit of the public at his own expense, every man being free to come, eat, drink and sleep at the cost and charges of the landlord. It is ludicrous and pitiable to look over the columns of old journals, and see the heartrending appeals to delinquent subscribers, and the generous deductions of prices which were offered if they would come up and settle. Arguments and entreaties were piled mountain high, and sometimes when ten or twenty years had passed without the appearance of "ary red" on the part of the obdurate "patron," dark threats were uttered that his name would be cut off the subscription list! This was only a small part of the afflictions of the proprietor. In his wildest dreams of prosperity, he did not venture to imagine that his ty, he did not venture to imagine that his types, paper and type-setting were his own property, and could be rightfully withheld from the publication of anything which anybody chose to suppose was for the interest body chose to suppose was for the interest 1 GRAND PRIZE OF $38,000. body chose to suppose was for the interest of the public. He was expected, as a matter of course, to puff and to publish puffs of 1 Prize of every invention, scheme, watering place, hotel, steamboat, railroad, which were to make other people's fortunes, with the ma-terials and labor for which he himself had paid, and to look for his reward in the consciousness of being a public benefactor! It was mean and mercenary in him to refuse to serve the public for nothing, and highly laudable and generous in the public to use his property and industry without compen-It was impossible that such a system could last, the most undoubted certificates of being a public benefactor not being a kind of currency which will pay compositors, butchers, or bakers. The result is that the private property of the press is no longer appropriated without compensation to public uses except in some rural districts, where a few famished looking newspapers still drag out a precarious existence in the forlorn old way, receiving subscriptions in enclosed in a "Government Post Office Stamped Enwood and potatoes, puffing soda fountains for a glass of soda-water, and tobacco shops for half a dozen cigars. But in business communities, people who have an axe to grind are now in the habit of grinding it at their own expense, and do not expect to avail themselves of the capital and labor of others in the printing business, more than in any other department of human enterprise. - Rich. Dispatch.

A GOOD THING IN THE STORY LINE .-Some years ago a Cincinnati paper received and printed the first chapter of what appear York Herald. ed to be a most thrilling romance, in the ex-pectation of being provided with the concluding portions as might be needed. The chapter was very ingeniously written, and concluded by leaving the principal character suspended by the pantaloons from the limb of a tree over a perpendicular precipice. It attracted the attention of the press, and inquiries began to be made concerning the continuation of the fate of its hero. Day after day the victimized publishers booked for the remainvictimized publishers looked for the remaining chapters, but in vain. They never came to hand. Finding that they had been sold, and wishing to put a stop to the jokes their contemporaries were cracking at their expense, they briefly concluded they story thus: CHAPTER II.—CONCLUSION.

After hanging to the treacherous tree for four weeks his pantaloons gave way, and Charles Melville rolled headlong over the yawning precipice.

He fell a distance of five miles, and came down with the small of his back across a stake afid rider fence which so jarred him that he was compelled to travel in Italy for his health where be is at present residing. He is engaged in the butchering business, and is father a large family of children.

SOMBRERO GUANO. N calling the attention of the public to this val-nable and recently discovered deposit of this ertilizing article, we will merely state, that like all other phosphatic GUANOS, its most valuable constituent is phosphoric acid, or bone phosphate of lime; and that its mercantile value, as compared with other GUANOS of its kind, may be easily de-different parts of the world, who have analyzed different cargoes, from average samples taken by themselves from the cargoes just as they arrive from the island, without drying or selection of specimens for analyzation. Each analysis will be shibited, if required, under the original signature of each chemist named:

Of phosphoric acid, estimated as equivalent to phosphate of lime, it is found to contain-By Prof. Morfit, of New York, Piggot, Baltimore, 89 60 Hayes, Boston, 89.20 Reese, Baltimore, Chilton, New York, Piggot, Baltimore Huson, Liverpool, Eng.

Thus proving that the value of this GUANO is not determined by a SELECTED CHEMIST, or SELEC-TED SPECIMENS, or even SELECTED CARGOES, but an average of the importations just as they arrive, and ist as they are offered to the public for sale. And for a like array of eminent authority, promiscuously obtained from promiscuous cargoes, in different parts of the world, we challenge a comparison with any phosphatic GUANO now for sale.
